

DISPLACED BUT NOT SILENT!

Nearly 4 million Colombians are displaced by state terror and by agribusiness bent on turning land and water resources into export dollars...

Eustaquio Polo is a leader of displaced people battling to prevent their land from being turned in palm-oil plantations. As a consequence, he has been subjected to death threats and accusations that he is a guerilla.

This event brings Polo to Boston, a city that has close relationship with Colombia by way of immigration and because much of its energy comes from Colombia.
